

"Our sweet grains from the Andes"

We are a group of 14 young people committed to the development of our rural communities. Through our collective work, we seek to transform our realities from the perspective of our land, culture, and identity.

¿Who are we?

We are rural youth with a vocation for change. We believe in the power of our ancestral knowledge, the richness of our local resources, and the value of staying and building within our communities. We are committed to a future where young people have opportunities to grow without needing to migrate

¿What is our vision?

Our vision is to create a sustainable community-based microenterprise with a strong cultural identity—one that rescues and revalues our ancestral knowledge, makes use of local resources to create natural and healthy products, and ensures dignified opportunities for young people. We want to actively contribute to the fight against malnutrition and migration, planting hope and well-being from our Andean roots.

¡With your support, we plant the future and harvest opportunities!
